Some of the legal documents connected with transportation are interesting. Written in beautiful copperplate hand on parchment and bound in heavy leather covered ledgers, they indicate the relentless arm of the law.

We have seen the records of indictment in the criminal registers, the prison records and court proceedings and now the carrying out of the sentence. Convicts were not just thrown on board and shipped out. The due processes of the law were observed at every stage and we can now look at details of the legal expenses in preparing for their departure:

A03/291 Legal Expenses Page 1130 Middlesex

An account of Thomas Shelton relating to convicts transported to his Majesty's Territory of New South Wales or the islands adjacent by William Wilkinson Esq., in the 'Lord Hungerford' the 2nd Day of August 1821.

Procuring and perusing the documents and writings relating to 65 convicts sentenced to be transported at the several sessions of Gaol Delivery holden for the County of Middlesex			6.	8.
Drawing contract to Transport them etc.	Folio 24	1.	4.	0.
Ingrossing thereof			12.	0.
Drawing Bond from the Contractor and his sureties to perform the Contract	Folio 23	1.	3.	2.
Ingrossing the Contract			11.	6.
Attending the execution of Contract and Bond			6.	8.

and so the entries continued for each batch of convicts until at the end there were charges for drawing up lists of the convicts, to accompany and be attached to, papers accompanying the ship to the Colony. These lists were not, of course, in the ledger but are probably some of the lists found by John in Tasmanian archives.

What of the 'Lord Hungerford' and her voyage? Details of the ship were not listed under BT/101/1 to 112. Ships Merchant Navy whose Home Port was London (1788-1854). This may have been because she was at one time registered in Calcutta but a lot of ships papers were 'weeded out' during the 19th century and nothing appears to remain of those for the 'Lord Hungerford'. However, some information was obtained from
